NOMINATIONS ARE OPEN FOR THE 2019 CO-PARENTING AWARDS

(Washington, DC) Not all former romantic partners with children are at odds. According to the Stepfamily Foundation, one out of two marriages end in divorce and sixty-six percent of couples that live together or are remarried will break up when children are involved. Frank Love notes, “It is very possible for co-parents to successfully work together raising their children.”

To promote effective co-parenting, relationship expert, Frank Love created the Co-Parenting Awards. Frank and his team believe that the improvement of the co-parenting landscape rests with:

1. Showcasing successful co-parenting stories;
2. Training individuals on successful techniques for successful co-parenting;
3. Celebrating co-parents who are no longer romantically involved and work well together raising their children.

The deadline to nominate a co-parenting family is May 8, 2019. The Co-Parenting Award will be presented on June 8, 2018 during an awards program. The event is free and open to the public.

The Co-Parenting Awards is an event that is created and run by the Co-Parenting Association. The Co-Parenting Association is a non-profit organization, with the mission of promoting effective co-parenting between individuals with children who are no longer romantically involved.
